Disclaimer

Comment Hut and its representatives cannot be held responsible for anything that may happen due to your use, misuse or ownership of Comment Hut.

Please use Comment Hut tools as suggested, it isn't a spamming tool, find relevant blogs and leave relevant messages on them and then everyone will be happy.

Paul Forcey and Stewart Alexander

Comment Hut is Born

I run a number of blogs, some of them are just blog farms built and used to promote my adsense sites but some of them are real blogs.

When I say real I mean they have real content which is updated by me on things that matter to me. They are in niches and are read by real people, they are not just search engine fodder.

Do you know what I love to see on these blogs?

Comments, yes comments.

Sensible comments that show the person has read the post and they have taken the time to leave a relevant comment.

If the person leaving the comment also includes a link I don't mind, the more sensible comments the better. The comments make my blog look popular and popularity brings more people in.

So what about leaving comments on other peoples blogs?

I don't mean mass produced spammy comments, I mean sensible comments on relevant blogs.

Boom...Comment Hut was born!

Read on to learn how to get the best out of using your purchase of Comment Hut

Videos and Audios

Every section of this manual has a Video and/or Audio that goes along with it. We know that some people prefer to watch videos so we have endeavored to make videos that cover as much ground as possible.

If you have a suggestion for something that we should cover in future videos or you feel we missed out something please let us know so we can break out Camtasia and our best speaking voices and make the video for you.

There are links to individual videos and audios in each section but if you prefer to get them all at once just go to <http://www.commenthut.com/training/>

All the Videos and Audios are provided in Zip format, you need to download them to your desktop (It may be worth creating a "Comment Hut" folder first and save them all in there), unzip them and when you look in each folder you will see something like:-

Just double click on the .html page icon and the video will open up in your Internet browser.

It shows as Firefox in this manual, as that is my default Internet browser:

If your default Internet browser is IE then you will see the large blue Internet Explorer icon:

You can watch the videos at your convenience and watch them as often as you like from the comfort of your own PC.

What is Comment Hut?

Comment Hut allows you to find blogs, lenses and Hubs that are on the topic of the keyword you enter into it.

Remember that the information is all from Google; we don't produce it or alter it in any way. These sites are the ones that Google consider relevant to your keyword.

You enter your keyword and Comment Hut returns a list of blog posts which are relevant to the keyword and allow comments to be placed on them.

That is the basic one line explanation, but in reality the Comment Hut is so much more.

You get access to information from 7 platforms.

Wordpress

Wordpress.com

Livejournal

Typepad

Drupal

Squidoo

Hubpages

The searches that are done will cover the top 1000 results for your chosen keyword in Google (rather than the 100 that the evaluation version does).

Remember that the information returned by Comment Hut is from Google, so while some of them may look skewed sometimes -- it is all considered relevant by Google.

These 7 platforms give you a huge opportunity to find relevant blogs, lenses and hubs (more on them later) and leave Relevant Comments on them.

Notice I have said relevant comments – this is one thing that I can not stress enough.

Don't even think about slapping 100 rubbish comments and hoping that works, it isn't good enough anymore to just spam as many blogs as you can.

You must add something to the blog, by making a decent comment you are adding to the blog as well as getting your link back to your site.

Since a picture is worth a thousand words please take a moment to download and view the video I made introducing the full version of Comment Hut.

Comment Hut is so easy to use that it is only 4 minutes long, but view it and if anything is still unclear feel free to contact me. You may need to turn the sound up.

Comment-Hut-Introduction

You could use Comment Hut to find niches within niches and I am sure with some use you will find many more ways to use it profitably.

Squidoo and Hubpages – What are they?

I am pretty sure you will have heard of the first 5 blogging platforms but you may not have heard of Squidoo and Hubpages.

We added these two platforms to Comment Hut in June 2007.

Hopefully you signed up to receive any further updates we may perform in the future. Since its release in November 2007, Comment Hut has been updated 3 times, so don't miss out!

We do reserve the rights to charge for any updates, but since it's release, all updates have been free, and are most likely to stay that way. Go back to the download page and do it now before the link changes. Be sure to use the same PayPal email address, as we do check each sign up manually.

Back to the Squidoo and Hubpages...

They have both become a bit of a phenomenon in the Internet Marketing world and are considered to be a must have in most marketers arsenal.

No matter what platform you are working on it is vital that you leave:

- Valid
- sensible
- useful comments...

A one liner or generic response just doesn't cut it anymore, your comments won't be accepted, you will have wasted your time and that of the blog owner -- and worse still; you'll be seen as just another spammer.

As an example of how the noose has been tightened, Squidoo have added a function recently where they can actually ban certain people from posting comments, so it is worth the time to read the post and then comment on it in a constructive manner.

www.squidoo.com

You don't get a blog on Squidoo you start a lense, at the time of writing these lenses are ranking very well in Google and are indexed very quickly – If you have a lense it makes sense to leave comments on other relevant lenses, commenting on a lense is just as easy as commenting on most blogs.

You don't need to have your own lense (although you should have one), if you want to learn more about Squidoo I strongly recommend looking here.

www.Hubpages.com

Hubpages is a place where you build hubs (I suppose you could have guessed that from the name).

Again they are very similar to blogs in that you can leave comments on them.

If you have your own hub (and again you don't have to have one to leave comments, but it makes it easier), you can build links from other Hubpages to your hubs.

Paul's Tip ;-)

While Comment Hut is all about leaving comments to your own sites, I would also suggest that you build your own lense and add comments from other relevant lenses to your lens.

Your Squidoo lense is a great way to pass along Page Rank, build up your brand and generally help your main site along.

It really is worth taking the time to set up your own lenses and hubs.

Search Tips

Comment Hut gathers its information from Google so anything that you would use in your Google search you can use for your Comment Hut search.

If you have a 2 or more word search term, then putting speech marks (quotes, or inverted commas) round them will get different results to just entering the words.

Dog bones will get different results than "dog bones"

Again, the results returned are from Google, these results are not made up by us. These results are straight from the Horses mouth (to coin a phrase).

Paul's Tip ;-)

Even if a result look like it has no relevancy, post a comment anyway. Test it out on a few blogs and see what results you get, you just may just be surprised!

In addition...

If your site is on dogs, don't just look for blogs on dogs, use some of the other keywords associated with your theme.

It is always worth thinking a bit wider than the few narrow keywords you may usually associate with your sites niche.

Consider relative niches and other words with the same meaning as well.

For example if your site is about Attorneys, then look up Lawyers as well. Attorney is the American word but in the UK and many other countries where English is spoken they are known as Lawyers.

Widen your range to find more blogs to comment on, if 10 links are good 100 are better.

It is also a good idea not to just search for PR7's and nothing else, the higher you set the PR the lower number of results you will be left with to comment on.

Commenting

Comment Hut does not include any way to auto post your comment.

This was a conscious decision on my part; I don't want to encourage people to just leave comments without reading the blog post.

That is just SPAM and it helps no one.

Getting links takes some work, but like any work it has its rewards, keep on adding links; keep building the momentum you'll soon be able to reap the rewards.

Take a look at the page with links to our customers success stories, these people all put work into the process, no work=no success.

Getting a PR5, PR6 or PR7 link back to your site is worth your time, read the blog post and then try and leave a relevant comment.

Remember that a PR1 today could be a PR6 when Google perform their next update.

You also never know who will read your blog comment, come visit your site and contact you with a offer.

Paul's Tip ;-)

One Comment Hut customer emailed me saying he has ended up becoming friendly with someone whose blog he has commenting on, they exchanged a few comments back and forth and then emails.

They are working on a new site together and all because he used Comment Hut to find relevant blogs and then left useful comments.

So what is a Relevant comment?

This is the question that people ask a lot.

"great blog"

"love wht u doin"

"sweet"

"You are so right"

Are not relevant comments and will do you no good at all, a few extra minutes spent writing something useful will pay off.

Think of it this way, would you approve a comment that was nothing but a url and 2 words which were so irrelevant as to be useless, that is just the definition of spam and that helps no one.

Some Preparation for Commenting

Preparation makes any job easier, take some time now before you start to get prepared (you could do this while Comment Hut is collecting information for you).

It is worth taking some time now to do these things, most of them you will only have to do once.

- 1) Download Roboform
- 2)Set up a Typekey
- 3)Join Squidoo, Join Hubpages, Join Livejournal
- 4)Get your url ready to promote

Don't look at these things and panic, you only need to do items 1-3 once.

If you decide that you don't want to work with Typepad, Squidoo, Hubpages and Livejournal blogs then you don't even need to do steps 2 and 3.

You could start with Wordpress and add one more platform to your work schedule at a time.

Remember 10 minutes now will save you time with every single comment you make.

Roboform

Roboform is a tool that's prime function is to remember your passwords for you, this is a great time saver in itself but I will show you how you can also use it to speed up your commenting.

There are two versions of Roboform, there is a free version and a paid version, the free version remembers 10 passwords (this may have changed by the time you are reading this) while the full paid version has no limits.

At just under $30 I think buying Roboform has been one of my best ever purchases.

The Roboform toolbar will appear at the top of your browser window, you can remove it if you wish. Just go to the toolbar menu and untick the one that says "Roboform Toolbar"

You will see the extra line at the top of your browser, they have a little green PC with sunglasses as their icon.

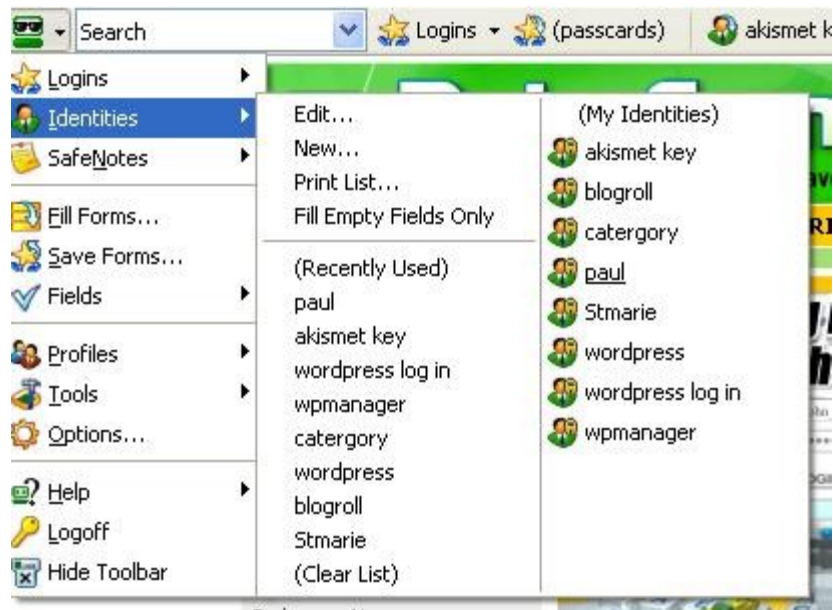

You can see the little robot icon on the left and a bit further along you can see some green men with a name next to them. These are identities and each of them contains information to fill out a specific form.

So you can set one up that includes your name, address and home phone no if you wish and then when you are filling in surveys or buying anything one click and Roboform fills in the forms for you.

Roboform is great for situations where you have to do the same task again and again, such as directory submissions or when you are doing comments and have to enter your name, email and url every single time.

You can now do it with one click.

I will show you how to set up a identity

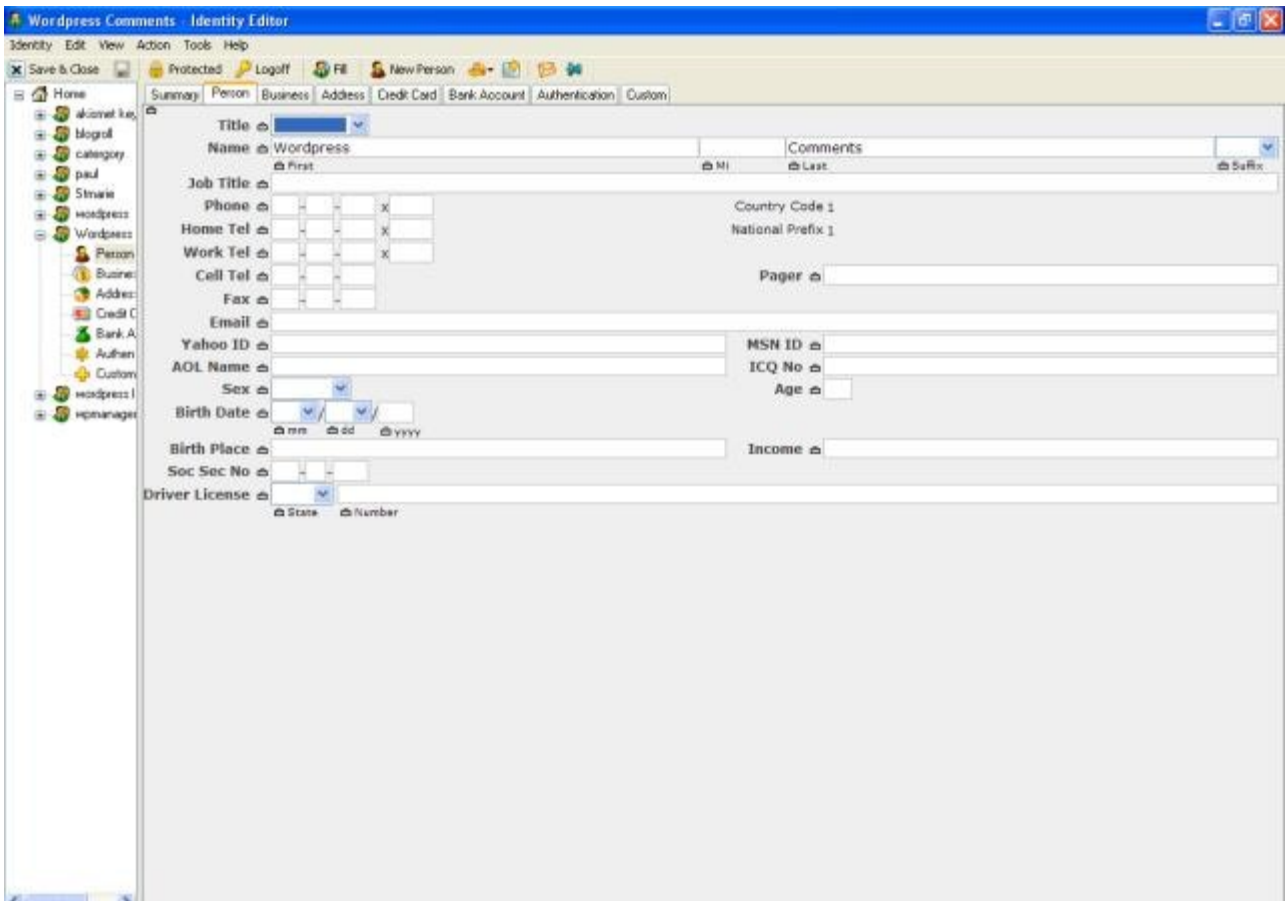

We will start out by setting up one for you to use when commenting on Wordpress.

Click on "New"

A little box will pop up, it is titled New Identity

Name the identity and pick a country, and then just click on OK. You will be taken to the identities page.

Looks like a lot of information doesn't it, Don't panic!
Go to the far right hand tab, "Custom"

Remember this is for Wordpress Commenting so what are the required Field names?

Leave a Reply

Name (required)

E-mail (will not be published) (required)

Website

Preview:

Name
 Email
 Website

Field Name	Field Value
Name	Paul forcey
E-Mail	paul@commenthut.com
Website	http://www.commenthut.com

As easy as that, no need to worry about the third row "Other Match Strings"

Now Click on the "save and close" icon (top left)

Take a look at your Roboform toolbar and you will see your new identity has been added
 There isn't to much room next to the icons so it is worth trying to keep the name short.

So your identity is set up, now what?

Every time you go to comment on a Wordpress blog instead of filling in your name, email and url you just click that Identity icon once and Roboform will do it for you.

Leave a Reply

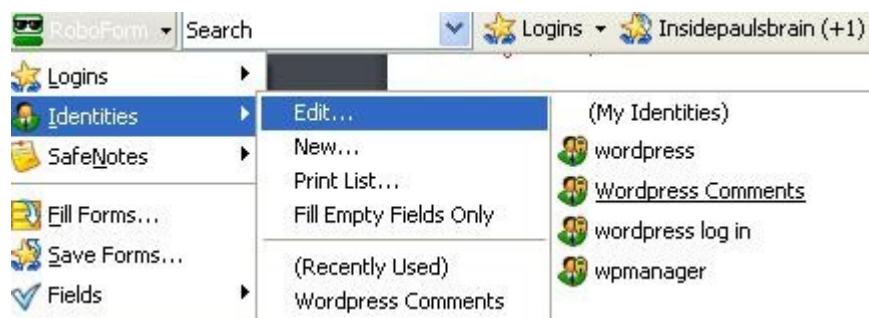

<input type="text" value="Paul forcey"/>	Name (required)
<input type="text" value="paul@commenthut.com"/>	E-mail (will not be published) (required)
<input type="text" value="http://www.commenthut.com"/>	Website

Preview:

Setting up the identity will take you a couple of minutes at the most, and as with most things the more you do it the quicker you get.

But What about when I want to change the website url, email etc?

That's easy, Just go to the Roboform Icon and edit the information.

Just go to the custom tab and change which ever details you wish to.

Remember you can have as many identities as you want so you could have one for each website you own if you wish, you don't have to change the info every time.

TypeKey

Typekey is a service offered by Sixapart, they are the company behind Typepad. If you have no intention of working with Typepad blogs then you can miss this step out.

TYPEKEY

- Overview
- FAQ
- TypeKey API
- Support
- Register
- Log in

On the left hand side you can see the "Register" option, click on that and you will be taken to a page where you fill in your information.

This is the top half of the page

Need help signing up? Use our TypeKey contact form if you're unable to register.

You are also required to give your name which is kept private and your email address. Make sure you use a valid email address as they send you a email for you to activate your account. Write down your username and password somewhere you will remember it.

Then last thing to is enter a captcha so they can see you are a real person not a script. Once you have activated your account by clicking the link they send you in an email you will see

Thanks for validating your email address.

Your email address has been verified and your TypeKey account has been fully activated. You can now use your TypeKey account to login to any TypeKey enabled web site or weblog.

You are now welcome to enter TypeKey and customize your TypeKey profile.

Edit Your Profile

Did You Know?

The TypeKey account you just activated can be used to:

- Comment on any TypePad weblog
- Comment on any TypeKey enabled Movable Type weblog
- Login to any TypeKey enabled service

You can edit your profile, and I recommend you add in some info about yourself.

Squidoo, Hubpages and Livejournal

Commenting on these 3 platforms is easier if you have your own Lens, Hub or Journal, you then sign in to your account before you start commenting.

All three of them are free and I estimate it would take you less than 15 minutes to join all three, again you don't HAVE to do this but it will make your life easier if you do.

If you don't know anything about any of these platforms, read on I do cover them in some depth later in this manual.

Squidoo

Hubpages

Livejournal

Get your Urls Ready

When I am getting ready to leave comments , I have a .txt page open on my desktop with the urls I am promoting, in both the full format <http://www.insidepaulsbrain.com/>

As well as the html format

Internet Marketing Blog

Being able to copy and paste this info saves me a little time, if you are using a mixture of anchor text then you could have all the variations saved in one .txt so they are all easily accessible.

How to Leave Comments

I am sure most of you will have seen at least a Wordpress blog before and have probably already left a comment or two or had someone leave them on your own blog.

Here is a short video that I made Leaving Comments

I will show you each platform here, if you already know them then feel free to bounce down to the next section – Ideas and Tips.

Just remember that while you may have heard more about Wordpress they are not the only game in town, don't ignore the other platforms.

Wordpress and Wordpress.com

Wordpress is the platform that most people know, it is free to use and is included in most hosting accounts as a one click set up.

When you want to leave a comment you will be looking at something like this.

The image shows a screenshot of a WordPress 'Leave a Reply' form. The form is titled 'Leave a Reply' and contains three input fields: 'Name (required)', 'E-mail (will not be published) (required)', and 'Website'. Below these fields is a large text area for the comment. At the bottom right of the form is a 'Submit Comment' button. At the bottom of the page, there is a footer that reads 'Powered by WordPress, Mandigo theme by tom.' and includes links for 'Entries (RSS)' and 'Comments (RSS)'.

Now that blank area can look huge when you are wondering what to do, so start at the beginning.

Name – use your real one, or something vaguely keyword rich – Dog lover, e-mail – use your real one, who knows the blog owner may decide that you are the next best thing and want to contact you

Website – this is important – remember to include the <http://> , make sure it is the right url (you wouldn't be the first to link to the wrong site), if your site is relevant to the blog and of a good quality then you will have a better chance of getting the link you want.

If your site contains 5 pages of nothing but AdSense ads and flashing banners then who wants to link to it, not me.

The Comment Area – This area can look huge when you are wondering what to put there, before you put anything in there, make sure you read the blog post and THINK.

It is better to spend an extra minute making a comment that adds some value to the blog and will be appreciated by the blog owner than making one that is rubbish and gets deleted as soon as you make it.

Click on the submit comment and that's all you can do, some blogs will have it set so your comment is automatically but most which have any sort of page rank will require the comment to be approved by the moderator.

That's why it is worth putting in a sensible comment.

If you find one that doesn't need approval then bookmark it and come back again another time.

LiveJournal

The screenshot shows the LiveJournal homepage. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for 'Create an Account', 'Post to Journal', 'Explore', and 'Gift Shop'. On the right side of the header, there is a login form with fields for 'Username' and 'Password', a 'Login' button, and a 'Remember Me' checkbox. Below the header, the main content area is titled 'Welcome to LiveJournal'. It features a central message: 'LiveJournal lets you express yourself, share your life, and connect with friends online.' Below this message, there are four icons representing different features: 'True Community', 'Content You Care About', 'Staying in Touch', and 'Your Personal Journal'. To the right of these icons is a green button that says 'Create a Journal' and text that says 'Joining LiveJournal is completely free.' Below the main content area, there is a 'Spotlight' section with featured user posts, a 'Sponsored' section with advertisements, and a large advertisement for sending text messages from a mobile phone.

Livejournal is a open source, volunteer supported blogging platform and it has (at this moment over 13 million blogs) they call them Journals not blogs by the way.

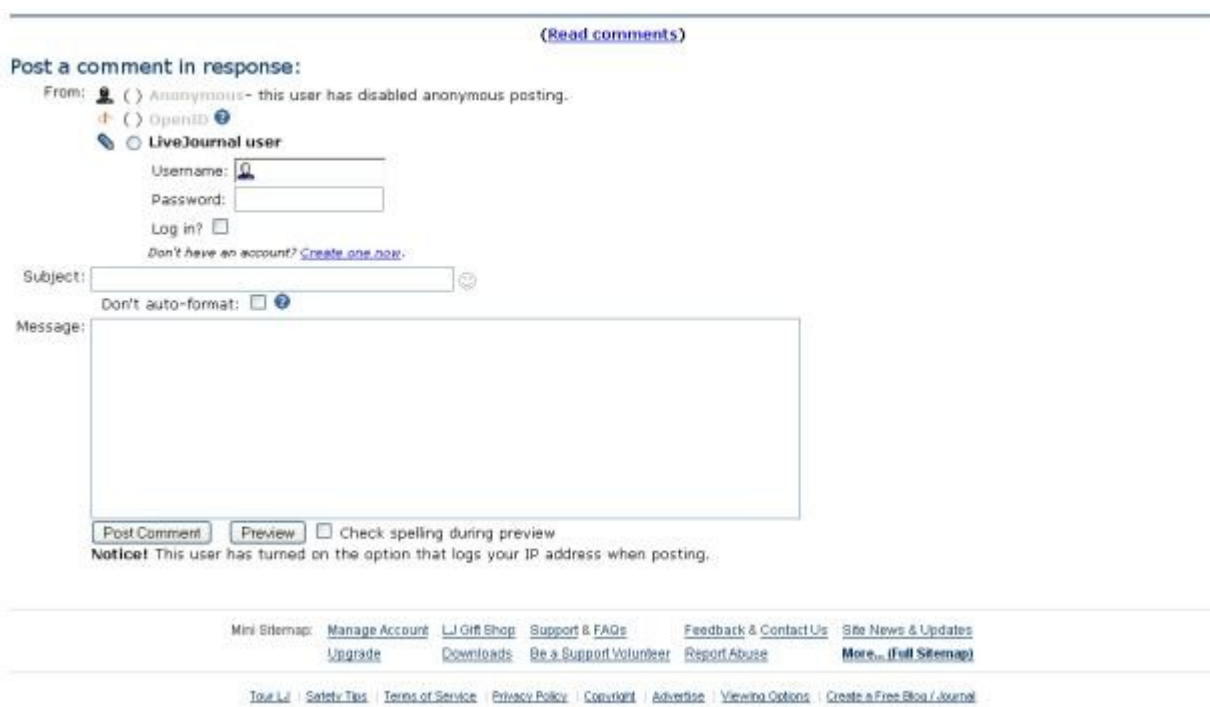

It is free to join and I would advise that you do join and set up your own journal, it won't take you a moment and I have found it to be a very good place for links. Having your own ID will also help your comments to stick.

This is a journal I found (and a PR6 at that) for the search term Dogs.

The screenshot shows a Mozilla Firefox browser window displaying a LiveJournal page. The browser's address bar shows the URL <http://cananian.livejournal.com/40963.html>. The page header includes the LiveJournal logo and navigation links like 'Create an Account', 'Post to Journal', 'Explore', and 'Gift Shop'. A login form is visible in the top right corner. The main content area features a profile picture of a man and a journal entry by 'C. Scott Ananian (cananian)' dated '2005-06-10 19:05:00'. The entry title is 'Victory is for the dogs (no, really!)'. The text of the entry discusses the success of off-leash dog recreation in Somerville, Massachusetts, following a city ordinance amendment. At the bottom of the entry, there is a link that says '(Post a new comment)'. Below the screenshot, there is a link that says '(Read comments)'.

I have read it and want to post a comment.
Click on the "Post a new comment" link.

The screenshot shows the 'Post a comment in response' form on LiveJournal. At the top, it says '(Read comments)'. The form is titled 'Post a comment in response:'. Under 'From:', there are three options: 'Anonymous- this user has disabled anonymous posting.', 'OpenID', and 'LiveJournal user'. The 'LiveJournal user' option is selected. Below this, there are input fields for 'Username:', 'Password:', and a 'Log in?' checkbox. A link says 'Don't have an account? Create one now.'. There is a 'Subject:' input field with a smiley icon and a 'Don't auto-format:' checkbox. A large text area is provided for the 'Message:'. At the bottom of the form, there are buttons for 'Post Comment', 'Preview', and a checkbox for 'Check spelling during preview'. A notice below the buttons states: 'Notice! This user has turned on the option that logs your IP address when posting.'. At the very bottom of the page, there is a footer with various links including 'Mini Sitemap', 'Manage Account', 'LJ Gift Shop', 'Support & FAQs', 'Feedback & Contact Us', 'Site News & Updates', 'Upgrade', 'Downloads', 'Be a Support Volunteer', 'Report Abuse', and 'More... (Full Sitemap)'. Another row of links includes 'Tour LJ', 'Safety Tips', 'Terms of Service', 'Privacy Policy', 'Copyright', 'Advertise', 'Viewing Options', and 'Create a Free Blog / Journal'.

You can see here that the user has disabled anonymous postings; this is to stop people doing drive by spamming.

Now I am sure you can understand why I suggested that you open up your own Livejournal account.

If you haven't already done so take 5 minutes to open one up now.

I don't advise that you tick the "Don't auto format" box, why? This is taken from Livejournals very own help page.

What is the "Disable Auto-Formatting" option?

When posting an entry or comment, LiveJournal normally adds line breaks any time you hit the enter or return key, and turns URLs into links. However, you can code HTML manually with the "Disable Auto-Formatting" option on comment forms and the HTML editor on the Update Journal page.

TypePad

To get a typepad blog you have to pay for it!

They start at $4.95 a month; this means that Typepad blogs tend to be made by more serious bloggers.

This is good for you as serious bloggers will be working on getting more traffic to their blogs.

More traffic means more people to look at your comment and check out your link. People who are interested in the subject matter and already like you as your comment is of such good quality.

Comment Hut has found relevant blogs for you to comment on so now what?

Not all blogs are the same, some of them will require that you become a registered user of the blog before you can leave a comment.

This is free and if you have found a high PR blog that is on a subject relevant to yours then it is worth the time it takes to do this. Especially if you think you will be coming back more than once to this blog.

Typekey is a service that is also owned by Sixapart, it is free to join and it helps you with Typepad and Livejournal blogs.

So you could set up a Typekey account for each niche you are working in and then sign into it once and that would help you with each Typepad and Livejournal blog that you visit.

Typepad blog commenting is as much about eyeballs as anything else, more people to your page means more sign ups for your list, more people filling in their info so you get income from your pay per lead ads.

Drupal

Drupal describes itself as a “Open Source Content Management System”, it is free to download and install it on your own hosting.

Drupal is not as widely used as Wordpress, so Comment Hut will find less blogs than it does for Wordpress but in my experience the blogs are of a very high standard and get some good traffic.

They also tend to be owned by reasonably techy people, so you will find lots of them in Computer, business and geek orientated niches. I have also noticed that there are a lot of them writing articles about politics.

I built a site and added two links back from Drupal blogs, nothing else, and it went to a PR3 in the first Google update thereafter!
Obviously I don't guarantee this will happen to your sites, but Drupal blogs are definitely high up on my list of blog platforms to use.

If you don't find a Drupal blog in your niche, well widen your search term a bit.
When you find a blog that you want to leave a comment on this is how the commenting area will look

I am sure by now you are perfectly aware of what bit of info goes where.

Make sure you use the same url set up for every comment you make.

What I mean is that you should use either:

<http://www.yourdomain.com>

Or...

<http://yourdomain.com>

Keep this consistent, don't mix and match them.

Squidoo

Squidoo has been a real phenomenon in 2007, it did get a bit of a slap from Google in the mid part of the year but it is still an extremely valuable source for links.

You don't make a Squidoo blog you make a Lens, and people don't update them daily usually.

At the present time of writing this manual, comments on Squidoo Lenses do not have the nofollow tag, so as well as getting visitors you can get the PR of the page filtered down to your site.

They have also added the ability for Squidoo lensmasters to ban webmasters who spam their comment section, so it is just one more reason as to why you should make sure the comments you leave are of a good quality.

You should have joined Squidoo when you were doing the Preparation for Commenting section.

Comment Hut has found some lenses now what?

Log into your Squidoo account, and then start visiting the lenses that you want to comment on.

Scroll down the lens, stopping to read any content and think about what you will be writing as a comment.

I do have a couple of ideas that you could include to help your commenting efforts...

- Include the lens owners name
- 5 stars function (As a member of Squidoo you can vote on other peoples lenses), obviously make sure that you have actually given them 5 stars first if you say so. Voting costs you nothing and takes a microsecond so it is worth doing.
- Write something about the content; if the lensmaster mentions their dog then why not name the dog in the comment.

You only have 300 characters so keep an eye on that side of things as well.

The commenting section on a Lens looks a little different to the ones you have seen so far.

The "Your Name" section is already filled in because I signed into my Squidoo account. So all I have to do is enter my "Blurb" as they call it, remember you only have 300 characters to use.

Include a link to your page or lense , links need to be in this format

`Keyword Here`

When your comment is posted your Squidoo name will show up with a link back to your lens master page, this is where people can go and see all your lenses and of course the search engine spiders will follow that as well.

So with one comment you can be building up visitors to your own lens or lenses as well as the sites you are promoting.

Security – they have random words come up and you have to type that word into a captcha box, this stops automated posting by spammers.

Good quality, informative and interesting comments will help you, spammy rubbish ones will not. Take the time to read the lense and make a useful comment.

Hubpages

I did say that you should join Hubpages before starting your commenting campaigns so I will assume you have.

You have found some Hubs that you want to comment on and you are now ready to start commenting.

Log into Hubpages, it is easier to make comments if you are a member of Hubpages already.

Open the Hub or Hubs in your Internet browser, Hubpages look very much like other pages, as before I suggest you read the page so you know what it is saying and that it is relevant to your site/hub that you are promoting.

Comment:

The format for leaving comments is a little different to Squidoo

When you are leaving a comment and you want to include a link you just put it in the <http://www.yoururl.com> format.

Now this obviously doesn't allow for a nice keyword rich link, but it is still a link from a relevant source and for the small amount of time it takes, I think that in itself is worthwhile.

What goes in the boxes?

Well if you haven't signed into your Hubpages account then you will need to put in your name, a url and an email address and finally write your comment.

As always making your comment relevant and interesting will go a long way to getting people to approve your comment (if they need to be approved)

Below is a screenshot showing how I filled one in.

The more info you put in your comment the better, if you are including a link put it towards the end of the comment.

As always don't make it a one liner, people spend time and energy on their Hubs so the least you can do is put something sensible in there.

You can link to your own hub, a website, blog or just about anywhere else you would like to link to.

Be creative and be original but remember that the more time, effort and thought you put in the more you will get out.

Ideas and tips

If you would rather listen to me then by all means do so
<http://www.commenthut.com/audios/Hints-tips-ideas.mp3>

I know that some of you will be building one site a year and promoting it while others will be building 100 a day so I am just sharing some basic ideas and suggestions I am certain that you will be moving far and beyond any ideas I have but here are just a few of my thoughts.

Timing – Try and break up your link building, by that I mean don't leave 100 comments all pointing to the same page on the same day.

Put aside half hour a day, every other day or once a week even and use that time to sit down and work on your comments. When you make Comment Hut part of your daily routine you will find it is quicker and easier to use, and gets your new sites indexed (or breath some life back into the old ones).

Natural – This could also be considered to be part of the timing comments, try to make your linking look natural, which 100 links in a day all to one page isn't (well not in my mind).

Your linking will look more natural if you build 10 links a day back to your site for 10 days rather than doing 100 links in one day.

Variety – So if you can't really add 100 links back to one page of one site all at once, what can you do?

Promote more than one site at a sitting and go back and carry on promoting that site over time.

Use different anchor text (that's the word that you add the link to)

Anchor Text

Deep Linking – Don't just link to your index page, link to your sites internal pages as much as or more than you link to your sites homepage. Make sure your site has a good internal linking structure so that the spiders that do come can go through your whole site easily.

Get some help – No I am not saying you need to see a doctor, I mean that you don't need to be trying to work all alone 😊

You can ask your partner to do some of the comments for you, I know that some people love reading blogs on just about anything, if you are lucky enough to have someone like that as a partner or friend use them to read and comment.

You could outsource the job, however my reservation with that is that in countries where English isn't the first language you may find that the comments are of such poor quality that they won't help at all.

There may also be a tendency to use the same comment more than once, if you have an outsource person that writes English at a high level then by all means use them, just make sure that you check the work they are doing.

Success Stories

There will always be people who will naysay any tool that becomes available, from the first car to the home PC someone has always said "That won't work", "That is no good".

Links are what makes the Internet go round and Comment Hut gives you the ability to find the best blogs, lenses, hubs and journals for you to comment on.

On the sales page we have included a few testimonials but there are more spread around the Internet on various blogs.

We have been lucky enough to catch the eye of some well known marketers; they promoted Comment Hut because they used it and loved it.

You have to use Comment Hut to succeed...

Here's just a few happy Comment Hut users who've banked their reputations on using and recommending it to their clients :-
